

March 23, 2007

To Whom It May Concern,

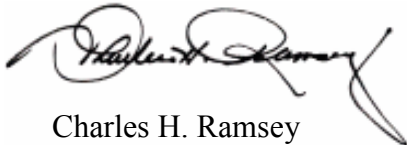

During my eight-and-one-half years as Chief of Police of the Washington, D.C., Metropolitan Police Department, my staff and I worked closely with the leadership of the National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial Fund (NLEOMF). For the past three years, that meant coordinating closely with Bruce Mendelsohn, the Memorial Fund's Director of Marketing and Communications.

Bruce proved himself to be highly professional and personable in all of our dealings together. I recall seeing Bruce at numerous Memorial Fund events, escorting VIPs, coordinating with media, and supporting the Memorial Fund's staff and supporters. Bruce was a passionate advocate for the goals and objectives of the Memorial Fund.

When the time came to create and implement a plan to raise $80 million to build the National Law Enforcement Museum, Bruce helped to energetically and creatively leverage the Memorial Fund's existing relationships and develop new relationships. For example, Bruce helped to coordinate my participation in a video promoting the Museum. The Memorial Fund truly benefited from Bruce's professional and personal skills, knowledge and expertise.

I enthusiastically recommend Bruce to your organization. If you have any questions, please contact me at thechiefdad@aol.com.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Charles H. Ramsey". The signature is fluid and cursive, with a long, sweeping tail that extends to the right.

Charles H. Ramsey